Extended Bio (~ 200 words; edit and use as you wish!)

Dr. Kevin Snyder is a globally recognized keynote speaker, multi-bestselling author, and TEDx presenter who has inspired more than one million people across 1,500+ audiences in all 50 states and around the world.

Ironically, Kevin is not a naturally motivated person. At just twelve years old, he was diagnosed with depression that nearly took his life. That experience sparked a lifelong curiosity about resilience, belief, and what empowers people to overcome adversity.

Kevin began his career in higher education, ultimately serving as Dean of Students at High Point University. He earned his doctorate studying the psychological framework of self-efficacy—the belief people have in their ability to succeed—and published his first book, Think Differently to Achieve Success. While working in Student Affairs, Kevin began delivering leadership workshops for students, faculty, and staff—presentations that would grow into a nationally recognized keynote speaking career.

Today, Kevin speaks to corporate audiences, associations, colleges, and schools worldwide, helping individuals and organizations shift their thinking, build resilience, and unlock untapped potential. Based in North Carolina with his family, Kevin's "claim to fame" is living out a lifelong dream: meeting Bob Barker and winning big on The Price Is Right. www.KevinCSnyder.com
